In an article published on July 27, 2022, Law360 Pulse highlights Chamberlain Hrdlicka Atlanta-based Associates John Bartel and Victor Fox joining the firm.

Fox told Law360 Pulse that he found the firm appealing because he could grow and "learn from the best in the field." "Starting off your career, the most valuable thing you can ask for is a mentor," explains Fox. "Chamberlain's roster of shareholders and senior associates are some of the best you can learn from in this field because of their extensive experience and success taking on complex work. From a first-year associate perspective, it really does not get any better than that."

Bartel told Law360 Pulse that he heard a presentation about conservation easement litigation from Atlanta-based shareholder, Hale E. Sheppard, at the Florida Tax Institute convention this year and "found the subject absolutely enthralling." Sheppard is a partner in the tax controversy and litigation practice and chairs the international tax section. "Combined with the desire to begin my career on the cutting edge of tax practice, I could not pass up the opportunity to work with the experts at Chamberlain Hrdlicka," said Bartel.
