Chamberlain Hrdlicka Adds Six Attorneys in Houston

Houston office continues to grow with addition of six attorneys

July 28, 2023

Chamberlain Hrdlicka's Houston office continues to grow, with the addition Emmanuel Almaraz, Mary 'Katy' Andrade, Greg Henson, Lucas Meng, Jonathan Stasney, and Hannah Strawser who joined the firm as associates in the Commercial Litigation; Corporate, Securities & Finance; Labor & Employment; and Tax Controversy practice groups.

With a total of 12 lawyers joining since the beginning of 2023, Chamberlain Hrdlicka's Houston office now has 90 attorneys. In anticipation of continued growth, the firm is renovating its Houston headquarters. The approximately $6 million of office improvements will include new community amenities, bring more natural light throughout the office space, and create a collaborative space for the way law firms work today to elevate all employees' experience. The growing law firm has recently expanded and is currently renovating its San Antonio office and has previously added 4,500 square feet to its Atlanta office.

"Our midsize, entrepreneurial firm offers a unique opportunity for up-and-coming attorneys to flourish and quickly develop their practices with the guidance of experienced mentors, allowing us to attract exceptional legal talent," said Larry Campagna, managing shareholder for Chamberlain Hrdlicka. "Ambitious young attorneys appreciate hands-on experience working with our clients, who expect both the high-level expertise typically found in larger law firms and the personalized service that our midsize firm delivers."

Emmanuel Almaraz is an associate in the firm's Commercial Litigation practice. He has represented a wide range of clients, including individuals and businesses of all sizes, from small partnerships to Fortune 500 companies. At Chamberlain Hrdlicka, he will handle a variety of commercial issues, including complex breach of contract, corporate controversies, and commercial landlord-tenant disputes. Almaraz started his legal career as a prosecutor in Chicago where he first and second-chaired jury trials, litigated dozens of hearings and bench trials, and drafted several appellate respondent briefs. His fluency in Spanish helps him communicate with witnesses and clients in preparation for settlement negotiations and trial.

Almaraz graduated from Northern Illinois University with a bachelor's degree in political science. He obtained his law degree from DePaul University College of Law, where he was the Executive Text Editor for the DePaul Journal of Healthcare Law and participated in the Asylum and Immigration Legal Clinic. He is a member of the State Bar of Texas, the Houston Young Lawyers Association, the Hispanic National Bar Association and the Hispanic Bar Association of Houston.
