In an article published on December 1, 2021, Law360 Pulse highlight's Stephanie Friese's new role as the new national chair of the firm's real estate practice.

Friese told Law360 Pulse that she was excited to assist the firm in developing its strategic goals and would focus on fostering collaboration across all offices and practice areas.

"We're a tax-centric firm, but we have a really strong corporate group, trust and estate, real estate and we have some other groups as well, but those in particular have synergies with real estate, so I'm looking forward to developing those opportunities," said Friese.

She further shared that another goal of hers is succession planning and making sure the firm is mentoring young attorneys in an appropriate manner and in a way that is inspiring to them to ensure they are investing in the next generation.
