AmyJo "AJ" Foreman is an associate in the litigation section. Her practice focuses primarily on commercial litigation, labor & employment, and appellate matters.

AJ graduated from the University of Houston Law Center where she was an active member of the mock trial team, winning awards for her advocacy at local and national competitions. While in law school, AJ defended many students in their Honor Board proceedings.

After law school, AJ clerked for The Honorable Juan F. Alanis in McAllen, Texas. Before beginning her legal career, she worked in fundraising for several esteemed arts organizations, including NPR and the Smithsonian. She will always have a love for the arts.

Because she has been an advocate in multiple capacities, AJ knows how important it is to understand a case from every angle so she can present it in the most compelling way.
